PRESIDENT'S DEBT PLAN FORESTALLED ACTION BY GERMANY

London Sees General Revision And Part
Cancellation

LONDON, June 22.—President Hoover's action in calling for a suspension of war debts payments forestalled the declaration by Germany of a moratorium effective July 1, the International News Service was informed by circles close to Downing St. today.

The German cabinet had already decided upon the moratorium, which was permissible under the terms of the Young plan. Such an action of Germany's part, however, would have inflicted another blow at her credit and perhaps intensified the international run on the Reichsbank by private foreign creditors.

It is understood here that upon hearing of the German cabinet's intention, President Hoover decided to take immediate action.

According to some diplomatic observers here, President Hoover is said to have asked President Hindenburg to request the American government to intervene, telling him in advance that his request would be granted.

London political and diplomatic circles today were confident that President Hoover's proposed suspension of payments was merely the first step towards a general revision and part cancellation of war debts and reparations. It was believed impossible that European governments would be able to resume present payments after a year's breathing spell.

Many observers felt that a world economic conference will be called immediately to thresh out means of economic restoration and to lift international business out of the worst depression of modern times.

Great Britain, Italy and Germany having accepted President Hoover's proposal with enthusiasm, it is confidently expected here that France will also be forced to agree to it. It is thought likely that France will make conditions and demand "assurances" for the future.

Prime Minister MacDonald, Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson and J. H. Thomas, minister of the dominions held a conference at 10 Downing Street today, preliminary to the making by the premier in the house of commons later of a statement on the debt situation.

LONDON, June 22.—President Hoover's proposal for a holiday for a year all around on inter-governmental debt payments was wholeheartedly accepted "in principle" today by the British government and all political parties of the country.

Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald issued a formal acceptance, in principle, of the American proposal and promised cooperation to give practical effect to the plan at the earliest possible moment.

BERLIN, June 22.—Prices of the Berlin Bourse soared today as the result of week-end accumulation of orders due to optimism caused by President Hoover's proposal for a war debt holiday. The opening averaged ten points higher than Saturday's closing prices. Young plan bonds being in greatest demand.

The Bourse was buoyant Saturday following announcement of President Hoover's intervention, but lost most of its gains before the close due to the Reichsbank's restriction of credit.

FATHER OF EIGHT
VICTIM OF KILLER

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—Sam De Luca, father of eight children, residing in San Jose, Cal., was shot to death here today by an unidentified assailant.

De Luca was the third of three brothers to be shot to death here since 1923. Jack and Mariano De Luca, brothers of Sam, were killed on September 23, 1923, and May 20, 1926, respectively.

De Luca was sitting on the front lawn of the home of his mother, with whom he was visiting, when an unidentified man fired two shots into his body.

No motive for the shooting was known.

BLOODSHED MARKS STRIKE

REWARD WILL BE OFFERED IN ATTEMPT TO FIND CLEWS TO QUARRY MURDERS; 3,000 SEE RITES

LIMA, O., June 22.—In an attempt to loosen the tongues of persons believed to know something about the murder of Earl Truesdale, 20, and Thelma Woods, 17, investigators today were expected to offer a reward for information that will lead to the capture of the killers.

City officials planned to hold a conference today or tonight to consider the possibility of offering city funds for reward purposes.

The reward offer was expected to be made because investigators admitted they were baffled and had made little progress in their attempt to find the killers.

Although they continued to search for three suspects believed to have assisted in weighing down the bodies of the couple and throwing them into a quarry here May 30, they indicated their chances of success were slight.

One of the individual offerings of reward already received was donated by John May, father of James May, the 22-year-old former suitor of Miss Woods who is held for investigation in the killing.

Nearly 3,000 persons attended funeral services for Truesdale at his home at Elida, near here, yesterday.

Photo shows the body of Earl Truesdale, O., from the same quarry near Lima, O., that a week previously had yielded the body of his companion, Thelma Woods, have convinced police that the case is one of double murder.

The youth is believed to have been struck on the head and thrown into the water. Photo shows the body of his companion, Thelma Woods, have convinced police that the case is one of double murder.

UNIVERSITY PRESIDENTS MEET TO PROTEST COMING WAGE CUT

COLUMBUS, O., June 22.—Presidents and trustees of the five state-supported colleges and universities tonight will protest to the state legislature against 10 per cent salary cuts ordered for their institutions by the finance committee of the two houses.

President E. B. Bryan of Ohio University at Athens, will be spokesman for the delegation. He will point out that similar salary cuts have not been ordered in other state departments.

President George W. Rightmire of Ohio State University, President A. M. H. Upham of Miami University, President H. B. Williams of Bowling Green College, and President J. A. Engelman of Kent State College, will join President Bryan in stating the objections.

The proposed reductions will cripple our teaching staffs, President Bryan expected to tell the general assembly.

He also expected to point out that other states have not found it necessary to reduce the money allowed educational institutions, it was said.

"BE DIFFERENT" IS
ADVISED BY BISHOP
IN BACCALAUREATE

Seniors Of Antioch Told
To Gauge Life By Future

"Gauge your life by the future, not by the past," said Bishop Paul Jones in the baccalaureate sermon at Antioch College Sunday evening.

His subject was "Shall we be different or different?" and he dealt with the attitudes which should characterize the college graduate of today, pointing out that the indifference to standards and cynicism in regard to ideals which so generally prevail are far removed from the "disinterestedness" which Walter Lippmann has advocated as a mark of maturity.

"Find out what people are thinking, saying, and doing, and then do something different," is the rule Bishop Jones gave for those who want to achieve individuality. "But you will need some standard by which to measure the direction of your difference," he directed, "or it may merely be quixotic. Take as such a standard the possibilities that lie ahead in the life of the country during the next forty years within which you will be doing your active work. Don't be afraid to be called ahead of your time, for one who aspires to any significant place in the world cannot afford to be anything else. The only alternative, unless one is content to be behind the times, is to be a typical man of your time and that comes perilously close to being a time-server. Figure out the probably desirable trends that lie ahead in different fields of life and build your thinking and activities in terms of those."

"What is going to be the tendency in government—towards more democracy or towards Socialism? Then start to work in that direction."

DEMAND FOR RELIEF IN AMERICA RESULT OF WAR DEBT RELIEF

World Silver Parley Offered By King As Suggestion

WASHINGTON, June 22.—President Hoover having proposed a suspension of governmental war debts for the relief of Europe, his administration today faced demands for action toward the relief of unemployment in America and economic distress in other parts of the world.

The President was called upon by Senator King (D) of Utah—who approved his debt suspension plan—to summon a world silver parley for the relief of silver nations, particularly India and China. King declared silver would have to be restored to a monetary basis before there could be any real recovery from world depression.

The Utah senator also suggested the President take steps at once to provide certain relief for American unemployment next winter. If the depression should continue, he proposed a nation-wide organization, combining all federal and state relief societies.

"All state and federal agencies should cooperate in providing for next winter's unemployment problem," said King. "The President has acted wisely to relieve Europe, but he must act just as wisely to provide relief for the rest of the world and for America's distressed."

A nucleus organization of nationwide character should be set up now to meet any contingency that might arise and to prevent human suffering if the depression continues."

From Alabama, meanwhile, came a criticism of the President's efforts to relieve Europe after the administration had blocked direct federal aid to America's unemployed. Senator Black (D) of Alabama, said it was "both amusing and tragic" to find the President trying to "divert the minds of people of the United States from the troubles to Europe's troubles."

The administration apparently anticipated such criticism as Acting Chairman Fred Croxon of the President's emergency employment committee announced that a movement had been started to coordinate all relief agencies. He said the Association of Chests and Councils, the American Association of Public Welfare Associations and the Family Welfare Association of America had agreed to cooperate with the federal government in raising charitable relief funds next fall. He declared there was no demand as yet, for federal aid funds.

King regarded the calling of a silver parley as of more importance than even the suspension of war debts. He said the world debt depression on the fact that various European governments had adopted the single gold monetary standard.

MINER DEAD, SEVEN WOUNDED IN BATTLE WITH AUTHORITIES

March Upon Mine In Violation Of Court
Injunction

PITTSBURGH, June 22.—Bloodshed again today marked the strike of more than 10,000 western Pennsylvania bituminous coal miners as the strike entered its fifth week.

One miner was killed and seven other persons were wounded when state police and deputy sheriffs broke up a march of National Miners' Union followers on the Wildwood mine of the Butler Consolidated Coal Co., near here.

The miners marched in direct violation of a court injunction issued by Judge H. H. Rowand, forbidding them from staging such demonstrations in the vicinity of the Wildwood mine.

The dead man, identified through his miner's check, was Pete Zigarac, of Wildwood. Seven other persons were wounded and were removed to Pittsburgh hospitals.

Over the week-end the strike situation had been ominously quiet. At daybreak, a mob of 200 men and women advanced on the Wildwood mine, hurling stones and foul invectives at miners who refused to respond to the National Miners' Union strike call.

Warned in advance of the proposed open violation of the strike injunction, a little group of seven mine deputies were assembled in the company office at the Wildwood mine shortly after midnight. They were awaiting promised reinforcements from the sheriff's office, when word reached them that miners on their way to work had been stoned.

As the mine deputies prepared to investigate the reports, reinforcements from the sheriff's office under William E. Braun arrived, and together they left for the scene of the disorders.

A volley of stones greeted them, and in the melee that ensued, Herbert Reel, a deputy, was wounded. He was given emergency treatment and returned to the sheriff's office.

By this time the original group of 200 had been greatly augmented by scores of additional marchers who poured in from the hills around Wildwood and coming from Springdale, Acmetonia, New Kensington and other Allegheny River strike towns.

Seeing that the small force of deputies was so distinctly outnumbered, the mob summoned the court to charge them. Eye-witnesses told of how the cheering, jeering mob of several hundred men and women, charged madly down the road, hurling stones at the deputies as they advanced.

A barrage of tear gas was laid down in their path by the deputies, then about a quarter of a mile from the mine, but the enraged strikers and their sympathizers disregarded that and charged onward.

Deputies said the mob fired first and that shots were known to have been fired from windows of nearby houses. Massed together in the middle of the road, the deputies answered gunfire with gunfire.

Shrieks of the mob rent the air, and the advancing column faltered to remove its wounded from the middle of the road. Meanwhile, the deputies fired warning shots into the air.

The marchers had had enough. Their ranks broke and they fled in all directions as the deputies pursued, hurling more tear gas and continuing the gunfire.

Many of them sought the protection of their homes, but they were followed by deputies who brought them out as prisoners.

They arrested twenty-six men and two women, who were taken to the sheriff's office to be charged later with rioting and violation of Judge Rowand's injunction.

REPORT OF ELECTRICAL RAIL MERGER IS DENIED IN DAYTON

DAYTON, O., June 22.—Reports of a "gigantic electrical railway merger" involving the Cincinnati and Lake Erie Railway Co., the Lake Shore Railway Co., and other Ohio lines, were vigorously denied here today by H. C. Donecker, vice president of the Cincinnati and Lake Erie Company.

No merger is being contemplated as far as this company is concerned," Donecker said. He was at loss to explain how the report originated, he declared.

The Cincinnati and Lake Erie would control the Cleveland Southwestern, the Columbus, Delaware and Marion, the Lake Shore and the Columbus, Marion and Bucyrus lines, according to rumors. Application will be filed with the public utilities commission soon for permission to consolidate, the rumor said.

Donecker branded the report as "ridiculous."

He said there has been no change in the business relations between the Cincinnati and Lake Erie and the other companies mentioned in the report.

RESTAURANT LOOT
AMOUNTS TO $500

CLEVELAND, June 22.—Safe-crackers looted the strong box of the Smith Restaurant Co., in downtown Cleveland sometime last night and obtained $500 in cash. It was revealed today when the offices of the company were opened for business.

The loot, police were told, was the Sunday receipts from the company's two restaurants which are operated beneath the offices. Miss Winifred Eliason, an employee, discovered the robbery when she opened the restaurant today.

Shanghai reported a lively market with quotations on bar silver, the backbone of the Shanghai trading market, advanced ten per cent. Advances from Tokyo reported a strong optimistic sentiment on the markets there with advances being scored throughout the general range of favorites.

Even in Vienna, where pessimism has held sway for several weeks past, owing to the critical situation of the Creditanstalt, Austria's chief bank, a brighter outlook was reflected in a stronger tone in the demand for securities and an upward revision of prices.

A strong buying sentiment was in evidence as soon as the London Stock Exchange opened with German bonds holding a favored position. Consols, Industrials, Anglo-American and German stocks also participated in the rally. Many bear traders were caught with short accounts and some urgent covering operations were witnessed especially when the advance spread over the whole list.

MAY ASK GUARANTEE FOR RESUMPTION OF PAYMENTS IN YEAR

None Such Guarantee
Offered; Some Think
Term Too Short

WASHINGTON, June 22.—President Hoover returned to the White House today to find the plaudits of the world on his desk for his proposal of a one-year suspension of all war debts.

There was, however, one notable exception in the chorus of commendation and acceptance. France is inclined to view the American plan with coolness. France benefits more than any other country from Germany's reparations payments, and consequently stands to sacrifice more than any other, save only the United States.

Whether the French will upset the plan remains to be seen, of course, but the tone of press dispatches and such private communications as have been received here from Paris caused some anxiety. It was intimated in these dispatches that the French were disposed to ask for guarantees that payments would be resumed at the conclusion of the one-year debt holiday.

The administration's answer to that was there would be no guarantees forthcoming. The United States, it was pointed out, has a bigger stake in the resumption of payments from France, and is just as interested if not more so than France in seeing to it that war debts are paid. Europe's debt to the United States totals some $20,000,000,000.

The French cabinet is to meet in a few days. Meanwhile France's attitude must be considered in doubt.

The President's plan was officially described here as being not a subject for international negotiation, i. e., it is a take-it-or-leave-it proposition which the world powers can accept or reject. Reservations, conditions and the usual international agreement can have no place in the Hoover plan. Consequently, France can take it or leave it. If she rejects it, the onus will be upon her.

While the President's move was approved on all sides in Washington, Democrats and Republicans

STOCK PRICES MOVE
UPWARD; AS TRADING
INTEREST SPURRED

Prices Gain 5 to 20 Points
In Early Recorded Sales

NEW YORK, June 22.—Week-end consideration of President Hoover's suggestion for a war debt and reparations-payment moratorium of a year or longer electrified the stock, bond and cotton markets this morning and prices resumed their spectacular upward swing, with opening gains of 15 to 20 points.

The stock market took its cue from the sensational advances on the London, Paris and Berlin bourses, where prices also scored week-end gains of from 15 to 20 points, completely reversing the reaction which closed Saturday's sessions on the other side of the Atlantic. That postponement of "political payments" will pave the way for the first genuine rebound from worldwide depression was the prevailing opinion in Wall Street today as stocks and German government bonds resumed their skyward move.

Stock sales in the first half hour today totaled a million shares, or about 100,000 shares more than in the whole of last Wednesday's five-hour session. Many of the favorites passed through the market in 10,000 and 20,000-share blocks, with prices, including Saturday's rise of 5 to 20 points from the low of last week, a strong market for cotton at Liverpool forecasted higher prices in the American market. Cotton in New York sold up $3 a bale.

W L W Staff Pianist Plays Despite Severe Handicap

By MILDRED MASON

TO maintain one's popularity on the air as a pianist over a period of nine years is in itself a feat but to do this despite the almost insurmountable handicap of a permanently paralyzed finger—that really is a feat. This is the enviable record of Fred Roehr, staff pianist of WLW studios.
 Only a few people are aware of Roehr's handicap and to hear him play one would never suspect that during the past twelve years he has played himself into the first rank of the country's accompanists without the services of the third finger on his left hand. A finger mangled hopelessly as a result of an accident shortly following his discharge from the army in 1919. "You know, I saw ten months actual service on the French and Italian fronts during the war and came out without a scratch, only to smash my finger on my return," Roehr says when discussing his handicap.

Something's the matter with that table lamp again. No matter. John will fix it when he comes home . . .

But that evening John finds he can't fix it. No tools, no experience, no time or patience to keep at it. What then?

Then call The Dayton Power and Light Company. (In fact, it might have been a good idea to do that in the first place.) Ask for the Service Department. Tell them your trouble and in a few minutes a skilled and courteous repair man will call. He will repair the lamp if repairs are at all possible . . . for he has the tools and he knows his business.

Charges? Not at all. This is a part of the service that The Dayton Power and Light Company provides its customers. And this minor repair department offers its services in the evening hours as well as all through the day.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Behold, for the peace I had great bitterness: but thou hast in to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind my back.—Isaiah, xxxviii, 17.

WARREN G. HARDING

Dedication of the memorial at Marion, Ohio, to the late Warren G. Harding, has come finally in the fullness of time, when it is possible to look dispassionately at the man and his career as president. The first mistake created by the tragedy which obscured the end of Mr. Harding's life have rolled away. It is possible now to get something in the nature of a balanced picture from which to form a judgment.

We believe that, in the main, the estimate of President Harding delivered by President Hoover as he stood before the tomb of his former chief and close associate, recently, will be the estimate which will prevail hereafter.

Warren G. Harding was a man of fine heart and fine qualities, a man of honor and honesty. Both in his strength and in his failings, he was amiable and lovable. He was earnestly and generously concerned for the welfare of the nation. When he went into the White House he revealed the largeness of his nature by surrounding himself with a cabinet that included some of the most able and distinguished men of the day, men who in the public eye were "bigger" than he. One of those men today is President of the United States, another is chief justice of the supreme court, a third still remains secretary of the treasury, and is one of the most able of all the holders of that place since the birth of the republic.

Would that Mr. Harding had been equally happy in all his choices! But if some of his errors were as costly as his happy judgments were beneficial, they, too, were the result of the element of largeness in his composition. He could not comprehend the possibility of meanness or treachery in a friend.

The substantial services President Harding performed for the United States were outlined comprehensively by Mr. Hoover. They constitute a record which demands from the nation lasting gratitude and lasting regard for his memory. The years during which Mr. Harding stood at the helm of the ship of state were intensely troubled years and full of confusion. Through them he led the nation steadily toward "normalcy." His achievements provided a sound, durable foundation of statesmanship and sane policy upon which his successors have been able to build symmetrically and consistently. What he began, and what they have carried on, have lessened immeasurably the shock of the world economic depression in this country. That should be recognized and remembered.

For the rest, the glimpse which Mr. Hoover gives of the trouble that haunted the Alaskan trip is full of pathos. "We saw him gradually weaken, not only from physical exhaustion, but from mental anxiety," said the President. "Warren Harding had a dim realization that he had been betrayed by a few of the men whom he had trusted, or men whom he had believed were his devoted friends. It was a cruel proof in the courts of the land that these men had betrayed not alone the friendship of their staunch and loyal friend, but they had betrayed their country. That was the tragedy of the life of Warren Harding." It was a tragedy that brings eternal condemnation on the heads of those who were responsible, but does not touch the character or personal honor of its victim.

The communist grafters who yell if they are asked to work in return for charity, would work or starve if they were in Russia and nobody would pay the least attention to their wails.

A medical columnist says it is difficult to reduce weight in any part of the body without reducing in general. Then it isn't true that you can "run your legs off."

Graduates may take comfort in the thought that the average commencement address is nearly as painful to deliver as to hear.

The reductions in the estimate of the probable size of the national treasury deficit must be bad news to the radical crowd.

The strawberry shortcake will still be with us for a little while, but make the most of your opportunities while you may.

Even if Mr. Hoover had no political intent in making his trip west, the correspondents would credit him with one.

MUST WE BUY PEACE?

Against any scheme to purchase European disarmament by cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States Calvin Coolidge has reiterated as a private citizen the emphatic protest that he registered more than once as President.

Writing for The Herald and Examiner and other newspapers, Mr. Coolidge confesses his inability to understand the suggestion "that we should pay foreign nations for doing them the favor of helping them reduce their armament costs."

This suggestion will find no favor with the American people. They know full well that there is no legitimate connection between cancellation of Europe's war debts to this country and co-operation by Europe with this country in the reduction of armaments.

By the terms of the Versailles Treaty, as Mr. Coolidge points out, the European nations entered into a solemn agreement with Germany to disarm.

Germany has kept her part of that agreement. The other European nations have not kept theirs.

Having refused to ratify the Versailles Treaty, the United States is not called upon to meddle in any European quarrel arising between the European nations which are parties to that engagement.

Having refused to ratify the Versailles Treaty, the United States should refuse to be dragged into any conference, court or league involving the Versailles Treaty.

In denouncing this latest attempt of the European debtors of the United States to trick this country into paying them to disarm by canceling their debts, Calvin Coolidge spoke the firm resolve of the American people.

His ultimatum in this matter should be made the official ultimatum of his successor in the White House and transmitted to Europe by President Hoover's Secretary of State.

The sooner such an ultimatum is delivered officially to all the signatories of the Versailles Treaty, the sooner Europe will know that the American people are not the simpletons in foreign relations that some European politicians seem to regard them.—Chicago Examiner.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Six former customers' men from Wall Street brokerage offices are today tending hot-dog stands in amusement parks.

Once a boloney peddler, always a boloney peddler.

LITERACHOO

The writing of crime stories entered upon a new phase with the issuing of "The Mouthpiece," a monthly magazine published by ex-cons for the edification of good citizens. Following is the sort of stuff ground out:

"Yesterday, at lock-up hour, as we stood by our cells on the top tier, he repeatedly declared: 'I'll beat that loom yet—watch me.'"

"Leaning against the rail he appeared to be measuring the distance to the floor below—sixty feet and concrete. His eyes were glassy and unblinking. He trembled and laughed aloud. We looked at him in amazement—it was the kind of laughter."

"The signal was given us to step into our cells. He, however, calmly remarked to no one in particular: 'This is how I'll beat that loom—'

"And with that he crossed himself, stepped atop the railing and dove headlong below."

"A dull thud. He knew no more looms."

"A voice, raucous and sobbing, broke the stillness: 'Never mind, Joey, I'll make them pay for that.'"

"The farewell of a partner. The vow, I know, was well fulfilled."

KNOWS HIS STUFF

One of the swankiest of New York's tavern keepers is a Corsican. For 25 years he salaamed to the Satin Section of Tammany Town and, having at length acquired sufficient cash, built himself a plush-lined joint where he may shower on an elite clientele all the resentment he accumulated in his Corsican soul in his quarter century of neck-bending. Now harken to him:

"In the old days," he says, "they bred better snobs."

Who knows? He may be right. Certainly he is in a position to speak with authority.

A LOST ART

The leading dress suit renter on the Bowery recalls the Old Days when he used to have to go down to the Fulton Fish Market and take the dress suits he'd rented the night before off the backs of his customers—figuratively speaking, of course.

"People," says the dress suit renter, "don't know how to throw parties no more."

VERB, SAP

Three views of Broadway by three good stagers:

"All the good actors are either in Hollywood or Greenwood."—Poor old Jimmy Thornton.

"Broadway really doesn't know the theatre at all, it is so immersed in the show business."—Jed Harris.

"Life is more important than art; and art is more important than Broadway."—Leslie Howard.

STEW STORY

The proud father of newly arrived twins staggered into Roosevelt McBride's place the other night to break the glad news. He was duly felicitated and the bunch wanted to know the sex of the new arrivals. Were they both girls or boys?

"As far as I 'member," said the proud father, "it's boy an' girl—or, maybe it's other way round—damfino!"

ALAS, POOR LEGREE!

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" has collapsed.

America's most famous and long-enduring melodrama has finally disappeared from the stage. For the first time since 1852 not a single company is playing it.

ASS OR ELEPHANT?

A woman called up one of the broadcasting studios the other night and said:

"Was that woman who just finished singing a Republican or a Democrat?"

FISH STORY

Joe Robie, the Prize Agent, got back from a week-end fishing trip the other day. He didn't catch many; but, he says, he tamed the fish so that "they came right up an ate off my hook. It was th' cutest thing you ever saw."

FLO'S FLAPPERS

Harken to Old Doc Flo Ziegfeld, crooning on his favorite topic: "The Chorus:"

"She is beautiful but not dumb," says The Glorifier, speaking of the modern lady of the ensemble.

"Invariably now she has a more than average intelligence—she must have, to achieve success. Often she is a college graduate. Oftentimes she has quit college to go into the chorus; and generally she will have an education equal to or better than the business girl. She may have a special interest in art or literature. It isn't so long ago that the girls in one of the dressing rooms started a literary club in the form of their own circulating library."

"She has more respect for herself, this lady of the modern ensemble, and rapidly she is learning to compel respect from others. She is more dignified and takes her work more seriously than ever before."

"Ambitious for higher rewards, the first thing she considers is, 'What will get me out of the chorus?' Certainly not late hours and dissipation, she concludes, for she must keep in perfect physical condition. Not only is this essential for the strenuous dance routines she must go through every night, but the moment there are signs of plumpness or lessened agility she knows she will be relegated."

ANOTHER KING ACQUIRES A DICTATOR

WHITE HOUSE ASPIRANTS ON DEMOCRAT TICKET SHRINK WITH RAPIDITY

WASHINGTON.—Colonel E. M. House may be right; perhaps Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York is as good as nominated for president on the Democratic ticket.

Nevertheless, the politicians I meet here in Washington continue to remark, qualifying, that unless he is nominated on the first ballot there can be no certainty about it. They are not quite willing to dispute Colonel House's prediction, but neither are they quite willing to accept it.

The number of Democratic possibilities who are at all seriously considered has shrunk surprisingly in recent weeks, however.

Not so long ago at least a dozen of them were mentioned as alternatives to the New Yorker. He has been accorded much the best single chance all along, but only lately has there begun to be an appearance of a strong consolidation of minority sentiment upon a selected very few of his rivals.

Today there is—upon two of them, decidedly.

This, to be sure, is assuming that Al Smith is not to be counted. He is, of course, to be counted, if he wants the nomination.

The fact is, Al is rather deliberately left out of the calculation—because, if calculations include him, he confuses their reckonings to such an extent that it ceases to be the same problem and becomes mighty difficult to answer.

Al Smith being omitted, there remain—

Governor Roosevelt, away in the lead, with ex-Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, and Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, as second place competitors.

Owen D. Young is hardly spoken of any longer. Ex-Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, Democratic national standard bearer in 1920, has eliminated himself by declaring for ex-Secretary Baker.

Gov. George White, another Ohioan, has shriveled to a vice presidential possibility—and not that if a fellow Buckeye should happen to land at the head of the ticket.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Al Smith's running mate in 1928, has not been referred to in weeks, except perfunctorily. Ex-Senator James A. Reed's boom failed to inflate.

All these figured pretty prominently at an earlier stage of the game, but the best of them rates now as a "favorite son," at the maximum.

There are other favorite sons also, to be sure.

And favorite sons candidacies sometimes are important, for trading purposes; but that is a matter of merely political, not general interest.

Presidential posters agree that Colonel House's Rooseveltian forecast would be safer to plunge on, were it not for the rule requiring a two-thirds majority to name a Democratic candidate.

That the New Yorker will go into the convention with more than half the delegates is deemed extremely likely.

To make sure of two-thirds, at the jump, is a harder contract. Let the Empire State's candidate miss at the outset, and the natural result will be to arouse the hopes of every Democrat in the country who thinks he stands a ghost of a show, and he and his supporters will resolve not to yield short of kingdom come.

That will mean a prolonged struggle, with "blobs" gradually merging—but probably not to the advantage of Governor Roosevelt. In whose, then?

As previously stated, prophesy indicates either ex-Secretary Baker or Governor Ritchie.

Why those two in particular? Well, one or the other of them seems logical, next after Governor Roosevelt.

Of the rest, who have been chiefly suggested, ex-Governor Cox stands as the only one who might make a really formidable candidate—and he has lined up for Baker.

Owen D. Young, liberal as he may be personally, obviously never would do, on account of his business affiliations; politically they would score too heavily against him. Ex-Senator Reed is an extraordinarily young old man, but for all that, he is 70. Robinson and White are dregs of overly-long record for satisfactory modification, and it is increasingly recognized that this will have to be a wettest Democratic nomination.

But Al Smith? Suppose he decides he wants to try again.

"Heaven knows!" is the correct response to that question. If Al chooses to demand a second nomination, it is perfectly foreseen by every politician in the land that it will be impossible for his party to refuse to him without tearing itself wide open. And yet, if he insists and it does not open anyway, will it not be torn wide open anyway?

Confidentially, a Democratic row over Al Smith is just what the G. O. P. is praying for.

SILLY QUERY

"Remember," inquired the Corn Fed Philosopher, "when you could go out to the old woodpile, scrape away the snow, set up the old saw-buck and saw yourself off a twenty flapjack appetizer?"

The answer is "No!"

"While the season is on, therefore, she devoted herself exclusively to the stage. Instead of cruising the clubs every night and sleeping through the entire morning after, as is popularly fancied, you will frequently find her going to bed comparatively early like a good little girl. The following morning, if the weather is favorable, you may see her on horseback in Central Park."

"So, the showgirl depicted as the industrious gold digger of Broadway may be placed in the same category with the garish flapper—gone, but not forgotten."

Camp Is Wholesome Place

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The summer camp idea for children is certainly a wholesome one. By adequate health supervision the camps are a vital necessity. It is up to parents to determine whether the camp selected comes up to the requirement of hygienic standards.

The association of a large number of human beings together in one spot, and the re-occupation of that same spot by successive groups throughout an entire summer always has certain elements of danger.

Such danger is minimized in cities and towns by careful selection or development of the terrain, and quite elaborate supervision of the water supply and the disposal of sewage. Similar precautions should be carried out as far as possible in camp sites. Since the primary object of the camp life is health, the hygienic arrangements of the camp should be the first object of inquiry.

The location and terrain of the camp is probably of first importance. The community health record for typhoid fever, malaria, and gonorrhea, have to be considered each in different sections of the country. The general location, and soil drainage, nearness to a stream of running water, and general cleanliness of the site must be examined.

The control of insect and other animal life is an important factor for health, as well as comfort.

Next in importance comes an adequate water supply. Adequate from the standpoint of amount and cleanliness both. An adequate supply is a hundred gallons per day per person. It should be free from contamination from seepage from privies, stables, homes or adjoining houses of any kind. Preferably it should come from a known good source outside the camp.

If the supply is to be from surface waters it should come from unpolluted small streams in hilly uninhabited, uncultivated regions. If from a lake the intake should be located distant from shore. If from subsoil or ground waters shallow wells should be drilled and cased to below the water level. Deep wells should be to the first impermeable stratum. The areas about the well should be kept clean. Curb and covering from surface contamination of proper construction.

Preliminary sedimentation and also sand filtration and chlorination of doubtful water supply is imperative.

Editor's Note: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clending can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth Street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

"This Thing Called Love"

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Never was there a more apt question than, "What is this thing called love?" What, indeed is it?

Sage advice to young people to the effect that they must choose their mates wisely, considering their good and bad traits, their fitness for mates, their dispositions, etc., etc., as if one were buying a car or piece of furniture, always makes me want to laugh. Methinks the advisors must perchance forget their own youth, and that sweet, wild, unreasoning sentiment that dominated them and made them want to possess the object of their affection.

A young girl writes that the boy friend is "one that gets sore for every little thing and he doesn't work or ever ask me to go out."

"Many times he would tell me things that hurt my feelings, but of course I wouldn't let him know. And then if I would say anything to him that he didn't like he wouldn't speak to me."

Now what happiness could any girl expect married to a man with a disposition like that? Yet this little lady is feeling badly because this guy, selfish, ill-tempered person hasn't been to see her recently.

"We both know a girl who goes with one of us more or less, and seems content to have us remain 'sore' at each other. I know by the former's actions that she wants to become friends once more, but she is either too proud or bashful to speak, and she probably thinks I won't answer if she does. I am afraid of the very same thing, for if she did not answer me I would feel very low. You will understand what I mean if you have ever been 'mad' at anyone."

"Will you please help me, Miss Lee, and I will feel ever so grateful."

When I have been in the predicament you are now in, Geraldine, I have always thought how silly the whole matter was, and that I was going to speak. If the other fellow didn't respond, I'd at least have the satisfaction of knowing that I'd done my part. And I don't remember an occasion when the other person wasn't more than glad to respond, and we had a good laugh about how silly we'd been to be angry with one another. Try it out. Speak first, and see how quickly your friend answers.

In 1923, at the conclusion of the British Open, an informal golf tournament was held between a group of British professionals and American professionals. In these matches the British were victorious.

In 1925 the history of the informal competition was the same. The fine fellowship displayed on these occasions inspired Samuel Ryder, an English sportsman, to suggest that these international competitions be continued. The officials of the British P. G. A. and of the American P. G. A. took kindly to the suggestion, and as a result the first official Ryder Cup Team matches were played at Worcester, Mass., in 1927.

Mr. Ryder at that time donated a cup which now bears his name, and it is for this cup that the golfing representatives from the two countries biennially compete.

Under terms of the deed of the gift laid down by Mr. Ryder, teams of the British P. G. A. and the American P. G. A. meet every two years, alternating between Great Britain and America, to compete for this trophy—the trophy being the symbol of expressing and promoting a better understanding between two great English-speaking nations through the medium of sport.

In the first matches the Americans won and in the matches played in England in 1929, the British were the victors.

This week at the Scioto Country Club in Columbus will be played what may be termed the "rubber match."

On the first day, Friday, the teams will play in forenoon, two of the British matched with two of the Americans. One point is possible in each of these four matches. On the following day the play is by twosomes, with one point possible in each of the eight contests, making a total of twelve points possible in the two days of play.

The following program is open to the public:

Monday—First American qualifying round, 36 holes medal play.

Tuesday—Second American qualifying round, 36 holes medal play.

Wednesday—The international dinner honoring the British and American Ryder Cup teams. Tribute will also be paid on this occasion to Robert T. Jones, Jr., American quadruple golf champion, and Miss Gianna Collett, American's woman champion.

Friday—The Ryder Cup team matches, morning and afternoon, 36 holes match play in forenoon.

Saturday—The Ryder Cup team matches, morning and afternoon, 36 holes match play in twosomes.

Wonder how "Bulldog" Smith, reputedly the best fielding third baseman in either of the two local softball leagues, felt Friday night when he was charged with five or more errors in the Lang game and the Graham Paints. "Bulldog" had a dime bet on the outcome of the game and was probably over-anxious. You can hardly blame him for being a little nervous with so much at stake.

SUSPECT ADMITS
KILLING OFFICER

AKRON, O., June 22.—Gus Tamulis, 37, of Youngstown, today allegedly confessed, police said, that he shot and killed Patrolman Foran L. Good, 36, during a street fight here last night.

The confession was written, authorities stated, Tamulis, himself badly wounded in the fight, was arrested by Patrolman Harry Munn early today, several hours after the shooting.

A second man, suspected by police as being Tamulis' companion in the attack, was captured by a radio cruise squad shortly after the alleged confession was obtained from the Youngstown man. Identity of the second man was not revealed.

He Painted Starr

Charles Lagosa (above), international artist, practicing his art at Greenwich Village, New York, has admitted to authorities that Starr Faithfull, supposedly slain madcap New York heiress, posed for him in the nude on one occasion. The beautiful girl posed for Lagosa's conception of "Maternity," he said, and told him she had experienced everything but motherhood. The incomplete canvas for which Starr posed is at left.

He is a member of Phi Rho Sigma medical fraternity. He graduated from Praxville High School, Dayton, with the class of 1929 and received his B. S. degree at Otterbein College, Westerville, in 1927. He will intern at the new Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland, starting October 16.

HEAT RELIEVED BY RAINFALL SUNDAY

A respite, if only temporary, from the blistering heat wave came to Xenians early Sunday night and to some extent Monday morning in the form of rainfall. The weather outlook for Monday was for cloudy skies and local thunder showers, while cloudy weather with no mention made of rain is the prediction for Tuesday.

Temperatures in and around Xenia ascended to above 90 degrees Sunday afternoon, but fell to the seventies before evening. The rainfall in the late afternoon was sufficient to banish the intense heat and produce cooler temperatures for the summer season was officially ushered in.

NATURALIST HEARD AT CLIFTON CAMP

Arthur Harper, naturalist editor of the Columbus Dispatch, interested in a nature study class of about twenty-five people at the Clifton 4-H Club Camp site Sunday. Mr. Harper, who has botanized practically all sections of Ohio and parts of West Virginia, was delighted to find some two or three rare specimens that he had never seen before.

The class consisted of nature lovers from Xenia, Cedarville and Dayton. It was through the invitation of Mrs. Pearl Wittenmyer, county health nurse and the sponsor of Miss Ruth Radford, county extension agent, that this opportunity was made possible. Those in attendance from Xenia were Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Kimmer, Judge and Mrs. R. L. Gowdy, Dr. and Mrs. Reed Madden, Dr. and Mrs. Rayburn McElwain, Mrs. Clara Jones, William Gowdy, Karl Bloom, the Misses Nell Weaver, and Hazel Schwab. Ruth Radford and Mrs. Pearl Wittenmyer.

Funeral services for Thomas J. Plymale, 47, former of Gallipolis, O., who died in White Sulphur Springs, Mont., a week ago, were held in Gallipolis Saturday. Miss Madeline King, Charles J. and John King, this city, a niece and nephew and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Allen, Dayton, attended the services in Gallipolis. Details concerning Mr. Plymale's death in Montana were not definitely learned but it is thought that he was murdered after being robbed of $300 in a hotel in White Sulphur Springs. It is thought that the murder took place June 12 and the body was not found until Monday, June 15. When found he had been shot through the heart and the money which is known to have been in his room was missing. He had often visited relatives here.

SEVENTY TAKE PART

More than seventy men students and co-eds took part in the seventh annual Antioch College water carnival, sponsored by Division "B" students of the college, at Grinnell's Park near Yellow Springs Saturday afternoon. The program, embracing nine swimming events for men and eight events for women students, also included novelty features such as a canoe tugging match, relay race and a duck chase. Weather conditions were ideal for the aquatic meet.

PROS BEGIN BATTLE FOR PLACES
ON AMERICA'S RYDER CUP TEAM

SCIOTO GOLF CLUB, Columbus, O., June 22.—Tumbled by swarming hills and an uncut rough—hazards that Mother Nature left behind—thirteen hopeful professional golfers teed off on this ruggedly simple course today in a 72-hole battle for two vacancies on Uncle Sam's Ryder Cup team. About them when they started out over these historic fairways, where the 24-year-old Bobby Jones won his second national open title in 1926, lounged the eight Britishers whom the two victors and six others will meet in the distinctly international Ryder Cup matches Friday and Saturday.

Al Watrous of Birmingham, Mich., and Joe Turnesa of Elmford, N. Y., were first at the tee, and when the first drive whistled over the rolling slopes, Columbus officially replaced Dayton, O., where the Western Open was held last week, as the world's golf capital.

Big Ed Dudley, the rangy, gangling Wilmington, Del. pro who mastered the traps at the Dayton Miami Valley Club to pocket the Western Open title, stroled to the tee in twosome No. 4, and from the hush that settled down over the grass when his long arms lashed into the ball it was evident that he was the man the crowd came to see.

With Dudley in the fourth twosome was Charles Hildendorf of Cross Point Shores, Mich. Before them came Olin Dutra of Brentwood Heights, Calif., and Henry Caird of Stratford, Conn., and Denmore Schute of Hudson, O., and Frank Walsh of Morton Grove, Ill.

Walter Hagen, captain of the American team in the approaching matches, went around with Johnny Golden of Noroton, Conn.

Craig Wood of Deal, N. J., Billy Burke and Wiffy Cox of Brooklyn, and William Klein of Williston, N. Y., were the other prospective qualifiers who set out today.

Dudley, the trap-conqueror, found few men-made traps on this course. No artificial hazards criss-crossed the fairways here. The natural roll of the ground and the severe rough are the golfers' worries at Scioto.

Winners in the qualifying rounds, which will end tomorrow afternoon, will team with Hagen, Leo Diegel, Gene Sarazen, Horton Smith, Al Gen. Woods, and Johnny Farrell.

Although the actual Ryder Cup play was scheduled for only Friday and Saturday, a busy week awaited the golfers.

After the qualifying rounds, Wednesday will be spent in practice. Thursday the Johnny Walker tournament for golf writers will be played. Throughout the week the United States Professional Golf Association, with 500 members present, will be in session.

Bobby Jones will come back to this scene of his early triumph Thursday for the international golf dinner. He probably will play in an exhibition match Sunday. Glena Collett, goldfom's queen, and Gene Turney, former heavyweight champion, were other celebrities expected to be here.

Shano has put fight into this Boston team. There's no doubt of that. And he's making the boys play better ball than Red Sox fans have seen for years.

Muddy Ruel, the veteran catcher picked up from Washington, is also getting some of the praise for the manner in which he has coached the Boston mound staff.

LEGION JUNIORS WIN DOUBLE
BILL FROM OSBORN JUNIOR NINE

After losing three games in a row, the Clites Service Junior American Legion baseball team of Xenia snapped out of it and defeated the "526 Specials," junior nine sponsored by the Legion post of Fairfield and Osborn, in both ends of a double-header on the Osborn diamond Sunday afternoon.

The Foody Post Juniors won the first game, 10 to 5, over the nine-inning route, and took the second, limited to five innings by a count of 9 to 6.

In the abbreviated second contest Reeves pitched a no-hit, no-run game for the Xenia boys. Only sixteen batters faced him in the five rounds, one batter reaching first base on an error. The Xenia Juniors obtained only five hits in this contest but tallied their cause and they allowed one run in the first inning, six in the third and two more in the fourth.

Confer made his debut as a pitcher in the first game and for the first eight innings he did not allow the Osborn nine a hit. He blanked them for seven innings, but in the eighth a base on balls, a sacrifice and an out at first enabled the "Specials" to score one run without a hit. Confer blew up in the ninth after pitching magnificently for eight innings, and Reeves was finally called to the mound to get the side retired, not before five runs had crossed the plate, however. The home team made only two hits in this round.

The Foody Post team collected eleven hits in the opening game, scoring four runs in the first inning, one in the fifth and five more in the seventh chucker.

"Whitey" Glenn was the leading swatsmith of the first game, the Xenia player knocking a home run and contributing two other singles in five times up. His circuit smash cleared the bases in the first inning, accounting for four runs.

GARDEN PRIVACY

BY DR. KARL F. KELLERMAN

Bureau of Plant Industry
U. S. Department of Agriculture
Increased interest in beautifying the home grounds has brought a greater appreciation of the privacy of the garden. Attention is shifting from the front of the house, with its noise and traffic to the more restful parts of the grounds. And this has brought a change in the planning of the house, which, in turn, makes necessary important changes in laying out the grounds. Both for convenience and beauty the arrangement of the grounds should be made to fit the plan of the house, horticulturists of the Bureau of Plant Industry point out.

There is a tendency nowadays to switch the living room from its conventional place on the street to the rear of the house. With skillful planning, the garage and kitchen are being moved to the front. This gives a more intimate connection between the living rooms of the house and the garden. The connection between the street and the service rooms of the house, including the basement and the garage, can be by this arrangement be made more short and direct. It should be, too, as inconspicuous as possible. Formerly the walk to the service entrance often went around two or even three, sides of the house, taking up valuable space that might have gone into lawn or garden. It also intruded on the privacy of the garden.

An important service need that must be planned for is fuel—coal or oil. Here is where the house planning and the landscaping should be considered at the same time, as the location of the heating plant will practically determine where the coal bin or the oil tank must be placed.

Dr. Karl F. Kellerman

ANTIOCH FACULTY, EMPLOYEES PLEDGE $12,600 TO COLLEGE

Faculty and employees of Antioch College have pledged $12,600 to the general funds of the college to help make up the estimated deficit in running expenses for the coming school year. The action came in response to a request from the administration for faculty and employee opinion on the advisability of accepting an educational foundation gift made contingent on assurance that those who shared in the Antioch project were willing to assume part of the financial load. The answer of those carrying the work of the institution was made in the form of pledges which total about 5 percent of the general salary and wage budget of the school. According to a recent announcement, President Arthur E. Morgan, upon whom the burden of raising the annual deficit for the college program has largely rested, is to take several months' leave of absence, beginning this summer. The action of the faculty and employees is due to their desire to assist in freeing President Morgan during his absence from anxiety concerning the college finances, according to a report of a recent faculty meeting. Antioch is chiefly dependent upon the contributions of those interested in progressive education measures as carried out there, and during the past ten years, it was pointed out in a report submitted to the college trustees this spring, such contributions have totalled more than $2,600,000.

WASHINGTON'S ADVICE TO YOUNG LADY STILL GOOD DECLARES SENATOR FESS

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Yellow Springs, vice chairman of the United States commission for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, has long been a student of the writings of the first President and has read practically everything written by him. When asked what he considered the most interesting letter Washington ever wrote, the senator smiled for a moment and said: "That is a difficult question to answer. Practically every letter he wrote was interesting. But the one he wrote to Harriet Washington, his niece, has always appealed to me. You must remember that when Washington took the time to write that kindly letter of advice to his niece, he was serving as President of the struggling young Republic and had more serious problems on his hands than any man in the country. I wish that every young woman in our fair land would read it. It is full of excellent advice that has a present-day appeal."

The famous letter to which the senator referred reads as follows: "Philadelphia, 30, Oct., 1791

"Dear Harriet, "I have received your letter of the 21st instant, and shall always be glad to hear from you. When my business will permit, inclination will not be wanting in me to acknowledge the receipt of your letters, and this I shall do more cheerfully, as it will afford me opportunities at those times of giving you such occasional advice as your situation may require.

"At present I could plead a better excuse for curtailing my letter to you, than you had for shortening of yours to me, having a multitude of occupations before me, while you have nothing to do; consequently you might with equal convenience to yourself have sat down to write a letter an hour or two or even a day sooner as to have delayed it until your cousin was on the point of sending to the post-office. I make this remark for no other reason, than to show you it is better to offer no excuse than a bad one, if at any time you should happen to fall in to an error.

"Occupied as my time now is, and must be during the sitting of Congress, I nevertheless will endeavor to inculcate upon your mind the delicacy and danger of that period, to which you are now arrived under peculiar circumstances. You are just entering into the state of womanhood, without the watchful eye of a mother to admonish, or the protecting aid of a father to advise and defend you; you may not be sensible, that you are at this moment about to be stamped with that character, which will adhere to you through life; the consequences of which you have not perhaps attended to, but be assured it is of the utmost importance that you should.

"Your cousins, with whom you live are well qualified to give you advice; and I am sure they will, if you are disposed to receive it. But, if you are disinclined, self-willed, and untowardly, it is hardly to be expected that they will engage themselves in unpleasant disputes with you, especially Fanny, whose mild and placid temper will not permit her to exceed the limits of wholesome admonition or gentle rebuke. Think then, to what dangers a giddy girl of fifteen or sixteen must be exposed in circumstances like these. To be under but little or no control may be pleasing to a mind that does not reflect, but this pleasure cannot be of long duration; and reason, too late perhaps may convince you of the folly of mispending time. You are not to learn, I am certain, that your fortune is small. Supply the want of it, then, with a well cultivated mind, with dispositions to industry and frugality, with gentleness of manners, obliging temper, and such qualifications as will attract notice, and recommend you to a happy establishment for life.

"You might, instead of associating with those from whom you can derive nothing that is good, but may have observed everything that is deceitful lying and bad, become the intimate companion of, and aid to your cousin in the domestic concerns of the family. Many girls, late have been found so trustworthy as to take the whole trouble of a family from their mothers; but it is by a steady and rigid attention to the rules of propriety, that such confidence is obtained, and nothing would give me more pleasure than to hear that you had acquired it. The merits and benefits of it would redound more to your advantage in your progress through life, and to the person with whom you may in due time form a matrimonial connection, than to any others; but to none would such a circumstance afford more real satisfaction, than to your affectionate uncle."

BRINGING UP FATHER

The Mysterious Young Man

By LOUISE GERARD

READ THIS FIRST:

Roy T. Burney, young American millionaire, makes a mysterious call on Helen, Countess of Mooring, at Mooring Castle, England. The countess, middle-aged, attractive, and the mother of three grown sons, is at first terror-stricken, then visibly pleased on Burney's appearance. Later, Ann Carmichael, daughter of an exploring professor who lost his life on an expedition to Borneo, hears the sound of a revolver shot as she returns to her apartment in London late at night. Outside the door she finds a man's hat with the name Roy T. Burney in it and a bullet hole through the crown. Frightening off two prowlers, she finds Burney inside the door, slightly wounded. She takes him into her apartment and while she prepares coffee he burns a packet of letters. She detects the odor of burning paper on her return to the room. Burney refuses to divulge his secret and the two spend some time in frightening off the two attackers who try to break down the door. In the meantime those who plotted Burney's life, four members of a family named Lamovitz, meet to determine the best method of making away with the young man before morning. As Ann prepares breakfast after giving the cat a saucer of the morning milk she stops in the doorway to the kitchen, horror-stricken. Her pet cat, William, lies on the floor poisoned by the milk, the death intended for Burney and herself. Meanwhile at Mooring Castle, Symonds, the butler, listens in on a telephone conversation of Countess Mooring's.

Symonds hears Lady Mooring call someone "darling" and "sweetheart." He determines to sift the matter to his own advantage. Burney, meanwhile, has offered Ann a position as his bodyguard at a salary which will enable her to take care of her mother. She accepts and moves her mother to new quarters in a better hotel. She takes dinner with Burney in his room. The Lamovitzs, apparently thwarted by Burney's counterplots, decide that to further their plot against Lady Mooring they must discover the whereabouts of one Lee Lawson, who disappeared 25 years before and who holds some secret which would place Lady Mooring in their power. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 12

BEFORE STARTING out the next morning Ann went to her employer's quarters to see if she were needed for anything. It was about eight o'clock. She found him in silk dressing-gown, sitting at the desk going through the morning's mail. "Can't I lend you a hand?" she asked when greetings were over. "This is business, nothing to do with your department." "But you ought to have a secret."

"So I have. A dozen, in the ordinary way. But I came over here alone. I didn't want any staff about, nosing into the present affair."

Ann had wondered why one apparently so wealthy had no retinue. It had all to do with the mysterious, intriguing business for which she had been specially engaged, and about which she must ask no questions.

She still eyed that mass of correspondence.

"But I should like to do something for my money, Mr. Burney."

"Quit calling me Mr. Burney."

A teasing look came into her eyes.

"Would you rather I called you 'Sir'?"

"If ever you do, Madam, it means the end."

His quick retort made her laugh.

"We're not exactly mere acquaintances, Ann. We've had an exciting time together. One murder and three attempts. That should be enough to break the ice even for—"

A loud and prolonged knocking at the door interrupted him.

"Come in," he called impatiently.

A waiter appeared with a tray.

Interested in all connected with Roy Burney, Ann inspected his breakfast; a very simple one. Half a grapefruit, a plate of porridge, coffee, toast and butter.

As the man approached, Burney fixed him with a steel-like glance.

"Haven't I told you not to knock at my sitting-room door?"

"Yes, sir, but I thought—" the waiter began, his eyes veering round towards the girl.

"Well, quit thinking, or I'll report you."

The man slunk out of the room.

"You were a bit hard on him for a small offense," Ann said, the moment the door closed.

The rapier-like glance now swept over her.

"Small offense! Haven't the mutt seen enough to know you're not the type of girl who lets men get fresh with her?"

Ann smiled. She was very well able to take care of herself; for all that, she appreciated his consideration and his insight into her character.

"Well, I'll leave you in peace with your breakfast," she said.

"I only met her a short while back."

"Don't fade out unless you really must. Sit down and say a few kind words to me."

There seemed so little she could do for him, that willingly she seated herself. On the opposite side of the small table he sat down also.

"What shall I talk about?" she asked.

"Any old thing," he said, attacking the grapefruit.

Given a free hand, Ann started on the subject that interested her most—himself.

"Well then, how did one so young become possessed of so much money? Did he make it himself, or had he that fortunate asset, a rich father? Oh! Those are questions, and I wasn't to ask any."

"They can be answered. Every cent that Roy T. Burney has, Roy T. Burney made his own little self."

"Did he really? I've never met a self-made man before who wasn't bald of pate and gone in the knees. How did you manage to make so much so early in life?"

"Since you've asked for it, here's my life history in a nutshell."

He paused for a moment, as though getting together words for a brief sketch of his career. As if he found the grapefruit boring he had pushed it aside after the first spoonful or two. Now, with an indifferent air, he was pouring cream on his porridge, all the time looking at it in a contemptuous manner.

"Don't look at your food as if you despised it," Ann said. "What you eat is feeding up."

"My internal mechanism doesn't work too well, I have to be careful."

He looked delicate enough, poor boy! Ann wished she could hand him over some of her own hearty appetite and constant and abounding good health.

Stirring his porridge, askance he looked at her.

"You don't think any the worse of me for being so C-3, do you, Ann?"

"My dear child, don't be stupid. Good health is generally a matter of care and attention in one's baby days. My parents were veritable demons on child welfare and care of the young. From the look of things yours weren't. So forget it, in the words of the U. S. A., and get on with the life history."

"You sure are right about the care and attention," he said in a relieved voice. "I wouldn't be the weed I am if I'd had a bit in my young days, but I hadn't a spot."

Ann loved babies, and to hear of them being hurt in any way always filled her with indignation.

"How's that?" she asked quickly.

"If I had my way I'd keep a special hot hell for all those who neglect small children."

"Well, you see, Ann, tradition says I was born in the Bowery, which you may, or may not know, is New York's worst slum. Anyhow I was raised there. The only parent I ever knew was a foster mother, and she didn't care a hoot what happened to me so long as I didn't get in her way. As soon as I could walk, I started in to do any old job that happened along, running errands, selling papers, minding automobiles, turning manacles, taking home washing. Anything for a few cents to buy myself a bit of grub. As soon as I was old enough I got a job in a garage. I was good at my work, a steady guy. I got on and saved money. Then I bought a bit of real estate."

Pausing, he took a spoonful of porridge. Ann said nothing. She was full of pity for him. She saw

The Theater

Apparently one sure way of being put to work in Hollywood is to announce plans for a trip to Europe. Joan Crawford, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and William Haines all tried it with the result that they had to make re-takes or start new productions.

Mary Duncan is the latest and is being sought for a role in Billie Dove's next starring picture. However, Mary went the rest one better in that she is in Paris. Some time ago she announced that she was sailing for Europe to give a opposite John Gilbert in "Candlelight." The part is the result of her good work opposite Robert Montgomery in "The Man in Possession." After seeing the preview, the studio renewed her contract.

A former screen favorite working at Paramount is Ruth Renick. She is doing a part in "Silence" and it is her first appearance in a Paramount picture since 1921. . . . George Fitzmaurice, who has been in the clouds since his wife, Diana, presented him with twins, has moved his family from the hospital to his home. All are doing nicely and three-year-old Sheila is rapidly becoming acquainted with her new brother and sister. . . . Hedda Hopper gave the Metro commissary a thrill when she appeared in an outfit with shoes and hat of the same material. She was just paying a visit. Although she is under contract at Metro she has spent most of her time lately at Pathe and is now playing in "Devotion."

Mrs. A. C. Messenger has gone to Washington C. H. to attend a house party.

Joseph B. Mason, who graduated from Central High School with the class of 1910, at present a sophomore at Ohio State U., will speak at Children's Day exercises at the Maple Corner Reformed Church Sunday.

According to reports of farmers in various parts of Greene County, prospects for big wheat and corn crops this year are most encouraging. Grain and hay crops with be light.

There is a little matter of terms to be arranged but Hughes is not one to quibble over money matters so the early part of July will no doubt find Mary back working at United Artists. Production on the Fox picture, titled "The Age for Love," begins the first of the month. Charles Starrett plays opposite the star and Edward Everett Horton is in a supporting role. Frank Lloyd directs.

Proof that favors do pay is found in the story of Kent Taylor who is now under contract to Paramount because he granted one. Testing a new camera idea, the studio needed two people to sit in the set. A feminine player was obtained from the lot but all the male players were busy so the casting office called Taylor. Executives who looked at the test liked Taylor and ordered more tests, with the contract resulting. He had been in-terpreting extra work with duties in an evening shop.

Irene Purcell was through at Metro and ready to go back to Broadway when she was given a new long-term contract. And now the studio has given her one of the cream assignments of the lot.

tion now. Will there by increasing co-operation between the nations and closer world organization? Make that cause yours. Is some form of planned production going to replace our industrial anarchy? Will the way be opened for greater understanding and team work between the races? There is still a chance to be different by pioneering in these fields. Will religion become more ethical, will literature go in more for thought as over against feeling, and will social life move toward a real recreation instead of being a form of escape? There are outposts to be manned at these points too.

"Of course this is not safe advice, and if you are looking for safe advice, and if you are looking for safe berths and the rewards that go with them, you will not attempt to follow it. But I take it that you want to amount to something rather than just get something of an amount. To do so you will have to be different—and in terms of the future.

"More than that, you will want to secure for others a chance to be different, too. Where civil liberties are restricted so that new and therefore unpopular ideas can not be freely advocated, you will make that struggle your own. Where labor does not have the right freely to organize and bargain you will work to secure it. Where social insurance is needed to protect people from the fears and hazards of age, sickness, or unemployment so that they can call both souls and bodies their own and act and think like independent human beings, you will put your influence there.

In a word, the determination to be different, when it is measured not by caprice but by the possibilities of the future, puts one in the ranks of those who are rebuilding the world in terms of the good life. It is of the essence of dynamic religion."

New York, Buffalo, Cleveland and Dayton, Ohio, and Butte, Mont., are the only cities claiming as many as two.

MAY ASK GUARANTEE FOR RESUMPTION OF PAYMENTS IN YEAR

alike, there was a disposition today to question what is to be the next step in the program. Many believe that the one-year suspension, while of undoubted value as an emergency measure, will prove too short for Germany's economic rehabilitation. It will, it is true, provide her and the world with a much-needed "breathing spell" in which to repair some of the ravages of the last year, but the question was asked today: What will happen if at the end of a year Germany and Europe generally are still in the morass of depression? Will the one-year moratorium be extended for another year?

To these questions there was no answer from an official source. The President's plan, it was said, was a purely emergency measure and did not indicate any major shift in American policy toward Europe and its problems, or toward the whole involved question of reparations and debts.

It is known, however, that Mr. Hoover was at first inclined to propose a two-year suspension instead of one year. It was argued that one year was too short a time for the accomplishment of appreciable recovery. In the end, however, it was pointed out that the period could be fixed for one year, and then, if necessary, be extended for another year, and Mr. Hoover accepted that view.

The end of the one-year period will be July 1, 1932. That will be exactly in the midst of what promises to be a most exciting and hardfought presidential campaign in the United States. With both political parties bidding for the so-called German vote in this country it can easily be imagined that a year's extension could be arranged. Suggestions that the logical next step in the situation is the holding of a world-wide economic conference were frowned down today in administration quarters. The American government, it was stated, can see no need for such a conference and quite probably would refuse to participate in one. Any conference worthy of the name would have to examine the war debts question, and that is considered a closed book by the American Congress.

President Hoover took particular pains in his statement Saturday night to make it clear that he did not even wish to remotely suggest any cancellation or reduction of Europe's funded indebtedness to the United States. This was put into his statement at the insistence of congressional leaders with whom he conferred almost continuously for two days.

Soon after the President's return from his Rapidan camp this morning, he was closeted with Secretary of State Stimson. Stimson went to the White House with a sheaf of reports from abroad.

Fate of Other Women Ocean Fliers Failed to Daunt Ruth Nichols

RUTH ELDER
HON. ELSIE MACKAY
RUTH NICHOLS
AMELIA EARTHART

The well-meant warnings of friends, uttered for the purpose of turning Ruth Nichols from her trans-Atlantic project, failed to dull the spirit of the fearless woman flyer. The fact that Princess Lowenstein Wertheim went to her death in an attempt to fly from London to Canada, or that Ruth Elder barely escaped the same fate while trying a New York to Paris flight, was no reason why the Atlantic should frighten everyone. It is true that Elsie Mackay, daughter of Lord Inchcape, gambled with the hungry ocean and lost; so did Mrs. Grayson and Mrs. Beryl Hart. But one woman came through. Amelia Earhart landed at Burry Port, Wales, the first woman to fly across the Atlantic. That proved that the jinx was not invincible.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Nearly three thousand miles of gray, heaving water. A monotonous expanse of tossing billows that reach greedy fingers towards the sky, seeking it seems to drag invaders of its solitude down to destruction in the death embrace of its restless bosom. That is the Atlantic Ocean. Mariners who brave its furies in stout ships tell of the terror it can inspire in the bravest hearts. The few aviators who have outflown and conquered it tell of its treachery, its fogs, its storms and its ice-laden winds—even in summer. Its victims are legion and its hungry maw insatiable. That is the Atlantic.

When Ruth Nichols, daring society aviatrix of New York, first announced her intention of being the first woman to make a solo flight across the Atlantic her friends used every bit of eloquence at their command to dissuade her from what they called her suicidal purpose. They painted word pictures of the Atlantic similar to that in the opening paragraph, and when the smiling Ruth calmly continued with her preparations for the flight, pointed out the fate of other women who had dared its dangers and found death.

Princess Lowenstein Wertheim was the first woman flyer who sought to wing her way to fame over the Atlantic. The Princess took off from London on August 31, 1927, to fly to Canada with Captain Hamilton and Col. Minchin, but after leaving the English coast their plane was never heard of again. The sea keeps its secrets well.

The next woman to board Father Neptune and throw defiance in his teeth was Ruth Elder, who, with George W. Haldeman, attempted a flight from New York to Paris in October, 1927. It was a miracle that saved them from death for they were forced down in mid-ocean and saved by the Dutch oil-tanker Barendrecht.

These recitals left Ruth absolutely unmoved. She continued tirelessly to plot and plan for the great venture. But her friends didn't give up hope of turning her from her purpose. They cited the tragedy of the Honorable Elsie Mackay, daughter of Lord Inchcape, who, full of the joy of life, overflowing with confidence and enthusiasm, took off from Cranford, N. J., in a biplane, and was lost in the English Channel. Captain Aldridge in England with Captain Walter Hinchcliffe to fly to other women who had dared its dangers and found death.

A tire from the plane's landing gear washed up on the Irish coast three months later was mute evidence of what happened over the tossing waters of the Atlantic.

Then there was Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson who, with Bruce Goldsmorrough, lost her life in an attempt to do what had cost so many lives. The same fate befell Mrs. Beryl Hart, who took off from Bermuda with Lieut. William S. MacLaren in the Tradewind for the Azores. A fragment of floating wreckage was all that ever came to light to tell of another victory for the rapacious Atlantic.

FARMER SHOTS MAN SEEKING GOLF BALL

HAMILTON, O., June 22.—On a complaint brought by a golfer who hit a ball into his cornfield, H. E. Crank today faced a charge of shooting with intent to kill.

Crank, whose farm is located near the municipal golf course, was arrested after Fred C. Schulthless, 36, of Hamilton, signed a warrant charging he was shot in the ear and the ankle by the farmer.

Following his arraignment, Crank was released on bond.

Schulthless said Crank shot him as he was climbing over the fence, Robert Sprandel, 13, son of one of the members of the foursome, also was injured, according to the warrant.

"Amelia Earhart beat the Atlantic jinx, so who can say that I can't do likewise?" was probably the thought uppermost in the mind of Ruth Nichols as once more she checked over the angles and details of her great venture. Undaunted, confident, cool and sure, she planned her campaign of revenge on the cruel sea that had exacted such a heavy toll from her sisters of the air.
